Stole a Bridle.

Yesterday afternoon, a man by the name of Ham Shetterly was seen by some one taking the bridle off a countryman's horse, which he had fastened to a post in the outskirts of the city, and making his way with the stolen article towards East Knoxville. The party who saw the theft immediately communicated the fact to the first policeman he found, Mr. Patrick Ashe, who at once followed up the thief. He came up with his man somewhere east of First Creek, and notified him that he was wanted, and taking possession of the bridle, attempted to bring the youth to the bridle, attempted to bring the youth to the her favor he was forced to release her. Superintendent's Notice. COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE KNOXVILLE, May 13, 1873.

I have received, for the use of Justices and School Commissioners, pamphle copies of the new school law, accompanied by the State Superintendent's address by the State Superintendent's address, which can be obtained by calling at the office of the city Postmaster, where I have established my headquarters, and will be glad to see and confer with all school officers and friends of education.

As soon as the State Superintendent's instructions are issued, which will be after As soon as the State Superintendent's instructions are issued, which will be after the Convention of County Superintendents at Nashville, on the 22d instant, I expect to meet the Commissioners and people at various points in the county, and confer with them in regard to the great work about to be inaugurated. The importance of prompt and earnest action by the friends of education in every school district in the county, cannot be too strongly urged. The success of the system depends upon the degree of vigor and harmony with which both officers and people take hold of the work. In this enlightened age when free schools have become a vital necessity, it work. fund for that year. Teachers will not be examined until State instructions are issued and I would pare themselves in the meantime for obtaining certificates of the highest grade possible, as there will be a great demand for teachers of the best class.

There are some obscure points in the law which will be constructed in due time by the State Superintendent and in the mean-while any suggestion from educators and the people in general which will assist me is earnestly requested.

A. M., the R. C. Jackson, under command of Capt. Hennegar, took down its first load of passengers to Lyon's View. The early boat load was composed of those who went to make the day one of recreation and real pleasure. They reached the landing on Col. Craig's place about 11:30, where they found the kind proprietor had made such arrangements for their comfort as his short notice would permit.

Hodgson's String Band was on hand, and took possession of a shady platform erected for them. A level plot had been prepared with sawdust for croquet and dancing. Messrs. Spiro had ice cream, lemonade and confectioneries provided. The day was spent in games, dancing and romping, and a good time generally. At 4 P. M., the boat brought a hundred or more, young and old, most of whom came for a moonlight dance and ride on the beautiful river. The views from the steamer's deck between Knoxville and Lyon's View are exceedingly fine. Those who have never steamed down the river should avail themselves of the next opportunity to do so, for the scenery well repays the time spent in the trip. We left

KNOXVILLE WHOLESALE MARKETS. CHRONICLE OFFICE, KNOXVILLE. TENN.,

May 13, 1873. Grain and Produce. GRAIN. - There is a very unsettled condition

GRAIN.—There is a very unsettled condition of the market, and it is almost an impossibility to give quotations in grain. There is a large fleet of boats at the wharf and the city is stocked with produce. Buyers and sellers are vainly endeavoring to establish a settled price, but up to the time of going to press, no settled figures have been agreed upon. There is a general decline in all kinds of produce which is in some degree owing to the market below being stocked as well as this place. The late heavy rains have caused a rise in Powells' river and in consequence a large fleet of boats arrived here and at Chattanooga, completely supplying the demand for produce below. The wheat at the wharf is principally composed of mixed lots, and all that has been sold was of that class, and brought from $1.40 to $1.50. Some of the boatmen hold back with the hope of forcing an increase, and it is almost useless to attempt to give quotations, but those below are as near as we can gather, which are, however, liable to change by this morning.

FLOUR.—The market is really overstocked, and prices range lower. There is also an unsettled condition in this branch of trade, and sellers seem unwilling to take buyers' figures. We give quotations of last sales made, but will not insure them to hold good to-day, as figures on flour, as well as wheat, are liable to change momentarily.
OATS.—There is no special activity in the oats trade, and we are forced to quote them rather

Corn .-- There is a large lot of corn at the wharf, and up to the time of going to press posales had been effected. The corn market is in so unsettled a condition that we cannot attempt
